

TLR Centennial Banquet Speech

Thank you, Julia, for the warm introduction and for leaving me some tremendously large shoes to fill. And thank you to all of you for making Texas Law Review the phenomenal institution that it is today. My name is Jason Onyediri, and I am the Editor in Chief of Volume 101 of Texas Law Review. I cannot stress enough how deeply honored and fortunate I am to be able to say that. Standing on this stage, on this night, in this position, in front of this group of people, is the honor of a lifetime.

Ladies and gentlemen, I'd like to briefly introduce you to my team, your incredible Volume 101 Editorial Board. To my fellow Ed Board members, I ask that you please stand when I call your name, and to the audience, I ask that you please hold your applause until the end.

I'll begin with our terrific, indispensable, Managing Editor: SARAH EATON. Without you, this organization simply would not function. Our Administrative Editor: CHELSEA SINCOX. Our Chief Articles Editor OLIVIA HORTON. Our Chief Notes Editor: GLORIA JONES. Both of our Featured Content Editors: VIANEY MARTINEZ and ALEX RIGBY. Our Chief Online Content Editor: TAYLOR LUKE, Our Managing Online Content Editor: CONOR GUEST. Our Research Editor: TREY FRYE. Our Articles Editors: TAITUM ALAND, JONATHAN RANKIN, DANIEL LAWRENCE, MARIE MULLINS, SOPHIA SHAMS, SAM LIBBY, and KAREN YANG. I hope you've recovered from our spring articles selection process. And last but not least, our Notes Editors: ZACHARY BADORE, DAVID YOUNG, CATHERINE CANBY.

Please join me in a round of applause for our Volume 101 Editorial Board.

To my fellow Ed Board members and the rest of Volume 101, I couldn't be more excited to work with you all as we collectively usher in the next century of the Texas Law Review. Thank you.